Into bill proposes to surveyed and to allow the importation and registry, tree of duty, of foreign-built ships as vestagles of the United States.

It is a serious injustice to the ship-building and industry, in that it proposes to piace on the free list is completed manufacture imported from a foreign country is left with a dety of at least 33 per cent.

It is true that the second section of the lift allows the importation of shipbuilding quaterlass free of duty. But this is only a theokery for a part of the cost.

The free-ship policy looks to the purchase abroad of whatever vessels we may want for the foreign trade, and would industably result in the destruction of the shipbuilding industry in this country. The average wages paid in an American shippard are at least 50 per cent. higher than in the English shippards. With this distance, required to establish extensive from ship yards in this country for as yet from ship yards in this country for as yet from ship yards in this country for as yet from ship yards in this country for as yet from ship yards in this country for as yet from ship yards in this country for as yet from ship yards in this country for as yet from BEVERSE THIS POLICY though required to establish extensive Iron-ship yards in this country (for as yet fron-ship building is in its infancy here) with the knowledge that they must compete with English builders in a common mar-lat.

the Ambiene that they must compete with English builders in a common martice.

The inevitable effect of the adoption of the policy of admitting completed foreign-built vessels to American registry, would be to destroy American shipyards and to transfer the building of such vessels as we utight need to British shipyards and British workness.

If there is any reason for the passage of this bill it grows out of the fact assumed that England can build stips cheaper and bitter than the United States, and theresis in the property of the proposes to abandon, practically, supplieding in this country, and transfer it to Europe.

What would have been the result of the appearance of the Confederate fron-clad Merriance in Northern waters if the Goramont of the United States had been confident to endland has to allow him to use such a vessel in the constwise as well as the foreign trade.

The passage of this bill should be justly regarded as the entering wedge to the admission of foreign-built vessels to our constraints as well as foreign trade.

For these and other equality good economic and patriotic reasons the undersigned dissent from the policy of allowing the free importation and American registry of foreign-built yessels which this bill proposes to inaugurate.
